CHEAT DEATH OF TEN MEN IN ARCTIC

Dog Team Rescue Crew Picked Up by Finnish Airplane

Kings Bay, Spitzbergen, July 14—(AP)—With ten men snatched from death in the Arctic, rescue planes and the icebreaker Krassin were intent today on reaching a spot some 30 miles to the east of Foyt Island. There it was believed that six men who drifted away in the balloon part of the Italia after the fatal crash on May 25 and possibly Roald Amundsen and his five companions on a French rescue seaplane might be found.

Find Dog/Team Crew.

The latest to be rescued, Captain Sora of the Italian Alpine Chasseurs and the Dutch engineer Van Dongen who had attempted to make a perilous march over the ice to search for Italia castaways, were safe aboard the base ship Citta Di Milano today. They were picked off Foyt Island by a Finnish airplane and brought to Kings Bay.

Depend on Russ Flier.

Dependence was placed on the Soviet flier Chukhovskiy for locating the exact position of the men east of Foyt Island since his keen eyes had spotted the Italian Captains Filippo Zappi and Albert Mariano and directed the Krassin to their rescue from an iceberg. The airman and four companions were forced down on the ice near Cape Platen, damaging their plane. They succeeded in reaching land, establishing a base and busied themselves in repairing the broken landing gear of their craft. From this point it was expected that they would make frequent scouting flights and again summon the Krassin to the rescue.

Italian planes will also join in the searching work over the ice of Queen Victoria Sea in the neighborhood of 80 degrees, 45 minutes north and 30 degrees 31 minutes west. It is known that Roald Amundsen held the view that the balloon party of the Italia would be found in this location and the hope is held that he and his companions may have reached them.

The Norwegian icebreaker Braganza was making its way today toward the camp of a marooned rescuer—Varming, a Dane. He had started out with Captain Sora but fell sick and was left at Cape Brun with a dog team and provisions.

Zappi's Condition Serious

The physician aboard the Krassin, which rescued seven members of the Italia crew on Thursday, sent word that Captain Zappi, whose leg was badly frozen, was in a rather serious condition. Captain Mariano, the other survivor of the "walking party" had some fever but only such as would be natural to one who had undergone so much hardship. The third member of this group, Dr. Finn Malmgren, the Swedish meteorologist, died on the ice from exposure on June 15.

The five men taken aboard the Krassin from an ice floe near the scene of the Italia crash had all stated to be in a normal condition. The physician said that Natale Cecconi, motor chief, whose leg was broken in the wreck, showed no other ill effects. The other four members of this group are Lieutenant Alfredo Viglieri, navigator; Professor F. Behounek, Czechoslovakian meteorologist; Giuseppe Biogo, radio operator, and Filippo Troiano, engineer.

Noble Is Recovering.

General Umberto Nobile, commander of the airship, was slowly recovering aboard the Citta Di Milano today from injuries to his leg and back. He was rescued by the Swedish airman, Lieutenant Einar-Paál Lundborg, on June 24, who has since been promoted to the rank of Captain in the Royal Swedish flying corps.

Captain Sora and Van Dongen were nearly exhausted from hunger when brought to Kings Bay by the Finnish airplane and two Swedish machines. Until sighted by the Krassin on its way to pick up the Viglieri group they had been listed among the lost.

The party left Beverly Sound on June 18 with two dog sleds acting on instructions to look for Captain Mariano and his two companions along the northern coast of North East Land from North Cape to Cape Brun.

The Norwegian flier, Lieut. Lut-zow Holm on June 21 found the Sora patrol and dropped a message to them notifying them that the group near Foyt Island had been located by the Italian flier Major Maddalena and he had reproduced them.

ROCK FALLS MAN SHOOTSELF AS FAMILY LOOKS ON

Destitute and Out of Work, Despondent Veteran Tries to Die

Archer Ramsey, a veteran of the World War, out of work and destitute, shot himself in the head at his home at Second street and Fifth avenue in Rock Falls at about 8 o'clock last night, while his wife and three small children looked on, powerless to prevent his attempted self-destruction. At the Sterling public hospital, where he was rushed, it was stated this morning that there was little hope for his recovery.

From Rock Falls officials it was learned that Ramsey, who had been very despondent all this week because of his inability to find employment, had threatened suicide earlier in the week at which time his wife had hidden the revolver which he had contemplated using.

Unknown to Mrs. Ramsey the unfortunate young man secured possession of a cheap 22 calibre single-shell pistol yesterday, and while seated at the table at their destitute home, with only a part of a loaf of bread on the table for the family's supper, he pulled the gun from his pocket, placed it against his right ear and pulled the trigger.

EMMERSON AS HE LOOKS TO A. P. WRITER

Republican Candidate for Governor Would Rather Fish

By WALTER T. BROWN (Associated Press Staff Writer) Chicago, July 14 —(AP)—"Lou" Emerson runs for office like he fishes.

"If I don't catch anything one day it doesn't worry me the next day," said Emerson, Republican candidate for Governor of Illinois. "If I'm not elected I don't expect that government will be shaken."

"Lou" laughed at that, little wrinkles breaking out all over his unusually seamed face.

Emmerson affixes Louis L., the "L" for Lincoln, to the documents he signs as Secretary of State. He likes, however, to be called "Lou."

Been Secretary 12 Years

For twelve years he has been secretary of State. The Republican gubernatorial candidate is sixty-five and doesn't look it, nor does he act that age. He can keep long hours, meet a thousand persons and shake that many hands, and not show the fatigue that a man not far below three score and ten usually reveals.

"Lou" is of medium height, spare; his long angular face with its prominent nose and broad, deep forehead is crowned with white hair. "I'm not the kind to worry," he remarked and that explained why he looked younger than his years. He chatted of his home town—Mount Vernon, his boyhood and his grandchildren, while outside his hotel room a faithful assistant fretted and fumed as more and more people came to see "Lou."

Born in Illinois

Emmerson was born at Albion, Ill., his father, of English descent, was a merchant there. On his mother's side the candidate received a strain of French and Swiss. Forty years ago Emmerson moved to Mt. Vernon. He has been a merchant and a banker.

"Lou" always has been interested in politics.

"Every man should be," he said. "It's the only way we have of saying 'I'm for my government.'"

"Voting is as important as going to war." There weren't any gestures, of raising of the voice over this aphorism.

"Lou" had been county chairman, a member of the state board of equalization and a prison commissioner when in 1926 he decided he'd like to be Secretary of State. He is completing his third term in that office.

Says He's Business Man

Emmerson says he is a business man, not a politician. That makes his friends smile, and they mention his plurality in 1924 when he was 923,000 votes ahead of his Democratic opponent. That was far ahead of President Coolidge's plurality, and a record in Illinois politics.

The Emmersons have been married forty years. They have two daughters, Mrs. Harold Watson, of Los Angeles, and Mrs. Henry Ben Ward, of Mount Vernon. There are three grandchildren, Wynne Ann and Patsy Lou Watson, 7 and 1 years old, and Louis Emmerson, 10. Louis Emmerson goes fishing with his dad and granddad. "And the little fellow can drag for muskies with the best of them."

"Lou's" eyes sparkled. He was on his favorite subject—his grandchildren and fishing.

Famous Fisherman

He's no trifling Nimrod, who fishes only occasionally or when there is nothing else to do. Sporting magazines have published his fishing experiences. He landed the largest kingfish ever caught. That was a few years ago when he was fishing off Honduras for barracuda. It was five feet, five and three-quarter inches long.

Yearly he goes into Canada to drag for muskellunge, usually with Major John MacQueen, of Kirkland. Mrs. Emmerson has complained as housewives will at the rods and reels and other paraphernalia of fishing that "Lou" has around the place.

"I like to take 'em out and feel 'em when I don't have time to go fishing"—again the little diamond pointed sparklers in his eyes.

Plays Good Golf

He likes to play golf and goes when he can to baseball and football games. He doesn't care about reading of sports. Emmerson enjoys the movie and the legitimate theater when he has time to go, which is not often.

OFFICIALS OF CHAMBER HOLD FINE MEETING

Session of Chamber of Commerce Was Full of Enthusiasm

Notwithstanding the fact that the initial board meeting of the Chamber of Commerce fell on Friday night, July 13th, it was a very successful meeting. Nearly all members of the directors and members of the advisory board were present. A more enthusiastic meeting was never held. Splendid speeches on the "good of the order" were delivered by business men. Several of the committee chairmen submitted excellent reports. Matters of great importance to the city of Dixon were taken up and discussed. Current bills were audited and ordered paid. The chairman of the membership committee reported many prospects and the condition of the membership shows much improvement. Members are paying their dues promptly. Within a short time the Chamber of Commerce will have something to report to the citizens of Dixon which will be of great interest to all who have the growth and prosperity of the city at heart.

John Knight, banker of Walnut, Ill., was in Dixon Friday afternoon and paid the office of the Chamber of Commerce a visit. He was accompanied by Mrs. Knight.

John Wagner of Ashton spent some time in the Chamber of Commerce office Friday afternoon.

Hon. Philip Ward of Sterling, Assistant United States District Attorney, was a Dixon visitor Friday and called at the Chamber of Commerce office.

Gordon Opens Session

S. D. Gordon, lecturer and author, but neither pastor nor preacher will give the opening address. He is one of the two men around whom this year's program is built. The other is Dr. John McNeill of Los Angeles, who does not arrive until Monday. They will each speak once or more every day.

Mr. Gordon's addresses will be of the practical and devotional sort so successfully employed in his seventeen books, titled "Quiet Talks." Advancing from a thorough and constructive service in the Y. M. C. A., Mr. Gordon has attained a world- (Continued on page 7)

THOMPSON AS HE LOOKS TO A. P. WRITER

Interviews Justice F. Thompson, Democratic Candidate

By WALTER T. BROWN (Associated Press Staff Writer) Chicago, July 14—(AP)—Floyd Thompson likes the noon-day glare of public service. He always has wanted to have a part in governmental affairs.

And when the Democratic candidate for Governor of Illinois says it's because he likes to be doing things for the "people," "meeting folks and seeing in contented communities the results of your work," it doesn't ring with the hollow sound of a political platitude.

Thompson who is "Mr. Justice" at Springfield where he sits as a member of the State Supreme Court, liked to hear of Washington, Jefferson, Patrick Henry and the other Colonial heroes before they were revealed to him at school.

"I can recall shouting 'give me liberty or give me death' to an audience of grunting hogs whose dinner of corn I was distributing," he laughed, running his hands through his thick, wavy black hair. That's a characteristic gesture.

The green county farm boy fairly devoured history and civics. He decided to become a minister because a minister was the first "public man" he knew. Later he turned to the law.

Always Liked Politics

During the politically torrid days of 1896 when free silver was the national campaign issue and every state was overrun with a horde of public speakers, Thompson eagerly followed his father father to Hastings near Roodhouse. Other boys dashed through the crowd, giving no thought to the oratory. But the stubby little Thompson boy was well up front taking it all in.

After high school, Floyd, still with his eye on the law, but without money for a college course, taught school. That he did in the day time. His nights were with Blackstone, the Illinois statutes and other legal tomes.

In 1911 he was admitted to the bar. He was twenty-four. He was not long in entering politics. Rock Island County was Republican and a Democrat running for office usually was just out for the exercise.

Floyd had settled at East Moline in that county, and when the Democrats selected a candidate they ran him for state's attorney.

"Merely to fill out the ticket," Thompson said.

That was the year of the Roosevelt bolt. Thompson was elected. He was re-elected in 1916. In 1919 he went to the Supreme Court where he since has been.

"I've been lucky; I've had the breaks," he said. "I'm pretty much convinced things happen because they are destined so."

Friends call his luck by other terms—persistence, pluck and humanness.

Plays Politics and Golf

Thompson has no hobbies, unless it be politics. He is president of a Rock Island golf club, plays golf but doesn't know about the Vardon grip.

"Every farm boy has hunted and fished, and I did those things, but I regard this as an indication of their owners loss."

The men had been sent there to clean and re-ement the walls.

A new shift had gone on at midnight and the foreman ordered that a small quantity of water be let into the tunnels by raising a gate at the pumping station. There was a misunderstanding, and too much water was loosed.

The workmen fled for their lives, most of them escaping by ladders extending down from manholes 100 feet apart.

There was a stand of seven feet of water in the tunnel when firemen later began pumping it out.

Rescuer Feared Lost

Carl Chiaro was one of those missing. He escaped during the first rush of water, but returned to rescue others. He carried out seven men. He went down on the eighth trip and was not seen again.

One explanation of the flooding of the tunnels was that the wrong tap had been turned on at the pumping station in answer to the request of the foreman, Stephen Szabo. As the water started to rush in Szabo ordered it turned off. Pumping station attendants were reported to have replied that they could not turn off the gate except at the order of the engineer, who could not be found.

The four fire engine pump squads had reduced the water in the tunnels to a 31-2 foot level by 9:30 A. M., and two inhalator squads descended to begin the search. Vast crowds thronged about the scene, and among them was Mrs. Genevieve Chiaro, whose husband, Carl, had saved seven comrades from the rising waters only to be trapped himself as he descended to rescue another.

Terse Items of News Gathered in Dixon During Day

LOWDEN SENDS DONATION.

Col. Frank O. Lowden, from his home at Sinissippi Farm near Oregon, has sent a donation of $50, to the Rock River Bible Conference, which opens its third annual session here Sunday afternoon.

SPILED REFUSE—FINED.

William McCarthy of Chicago was fined $10 and costs by Justice of the Peace J. O. Shaulis Friday afternoon on a charge of spilling refuse on the streets of Dixon. The refuse leaking from a truck which he was driving on Galena avenue where he was taken in custody by the police.

GEORGE DAVIS JAILED.

George Davis, colored, who has given the police considerable trouble in the past, was arrested Friday evening on a charge of drunkenness, and this morning he was fined $200 and costs by Justice Martin J. Gannon, who remanded him to the county jail to board out the fine.

SPEEDERS ARE FINED.

C. Buell and Orville Attebury were given minimum fines and costs by Police Magistrate A. E. Simonson Friday evening on charges of speeding preferred by State Highway Policemen Kenneth Church and Hal Roberts of this city. The two were apprehended while exceeding the speed limit on the state hospital road.

DR. SMITH INJURED.

Dr. J. Clarence Smith of 205 Hennepin avenue suffered a slight contusion at the back of his head at 7 o'clock this morning when Frank Morrison's Dodge car, in which he was a passenger, and Dr. A. W. Chandler's Chrysler, collided at the intersection of Second street and Peoria avenue. The cars were not badly damaged and Dr. Smith's injury is in no way serious.

REPAIRS RIVER ROAD.

SEVEN WORKMEN DROWNED WHEN SEWER FLOODS

Mistaken Order Floods Tunnel Filled With Workmen in Chicago

Chicago, July 14—(AP)—The bodies of three men were found early this afternoon in the sewer where they were trapped last night by a flood of water. The rescue squad of firemen word they believe there were no other bodies in the tunnel.

Chicago, July 14—(AP)—Probably that seven workmen lost their lives when water flooded a sewer in which they were working last night was voiced today by J. D. Alexander, night foreman.

Seven coats, hats and lunches left at the top of the shaft into the cavern had not been claimed. Alexander regards this as an indication of their owners loss.

The men had been sent there to clean and re-ement the walls. A new shift had gone on at midnight and the foreman ordered that a small quantity of water be let into the tunnels by raising a gate at the pumping station. There was a misunderstanding, and too much water was loosed.

MEXICAN AIR HERO DIES IN CRASH ON WAY HOME FROM GOOD WILL VISIT

Body and Wrecked Plane Found in Lonely New Jersey Swamp—United States Offers Full Military Honors

Washington, July 14—(AP)—President Coolidge has tendered President Calles of Mexico the battleship Florida to carry the body of Captain Emilio Carranza, Mexican air ace, back to Mexico.

At the same time by direction of Secretary Kellogg, the War Department began plans to extend full military honors for the dead aviator in New York and at the time the casket is transferred to the battleship, if the President's offer is accepted by the Mexican chief executive.

Secretary Kellogg has notified the Mexican embassy here of the offer and also directed Ambassador Morrow in Mexico City by telephone today to communicate it to President Calles and the Mexican foreign office.

Found by Berry Pickers

His body, crushed and broken, and the wrecked machine, a Ryan monoplane similar to that used by Col. Lindbergh in his trans-Atlantic flight, were found yesterday by berry pickers wandering through the underbrush shortly after another electrical storm had swept through that section.

The cause of the crash in which the 22-year-old Mexican army flier met his death after having brought by air a message of good will from his native land to the United States was uncertain. Two theories were advanced—one that the plane was demolished high in the air by lightning and the other that it was wrecked by a wind sound.

Think Lightning Struck Him.

The lightning theory was somewhat substantiated by six residents of Chatsworth. Those residents heard the road of an airplane about 9 o'clock Thursday night, a few minutes before a severe electrical storm swept across the pines.

Today men of the United States Army and members of the Mount Holly post of the American Legion stood as a guard of honor over Captain Carranza's body, over which an American flag had been draped, awaiting the arrival of the aviator's father from New York and the Mexican Ambassador from Washington. A certificate of accidental death was issued by Coroner Benjamin F. Farner permitting the removal of the body from Mount Holly without any other civil formalities.

Will Study Wreck.

Portions of the monoplane that were recovered were placed in the armory of Company M, 114th Infantry to await examination by aviation experts from Mitchell Field and by Lieutenant Bullock, U. S. A. from Fort Monmouth, Oceanport, N. J., in an effort to determine the cause of the accident.

Warned Him Not To Start.

Captain Carranza took off from Roosevelt Field, at 7:18 P. M. Thursday in the face of an impending storm and against the advice of experts at the field. So isolated is the spot where he crashed that the wreckage, scattered through the woods was not found until 18 hours later. Another three hours elapsed before identification was established. In the meantime efforts were made all along his route to find trace of him. Not once was he reported. There was no news at all until the berry pickers' discovery.

Attempting to Land.

Aviation experts concluded Carranza had come to grief in attempting to make a forced landing when the storm had left him helpless. In attempting to reconstruct the tragedy, these experts noted that he clutched a flashlight in his left hand, indicating that he was trying to locate a landing place. They believed that he had come too close to the ground before he was aware of its proximity and that the machine struck, the flier was hurled out and the plane bounced along the uneven terrain, being smashed as it hopped from point to point, until it halted against a clump of trees.

There through the night, and until 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon, the wreckage lay, with the body of the intrepid flier stretched out, face downward, lying sixty feet away.

The tragedy was discovered by John Henry Carr, his mother, Mrs. Mary Carr and his sister, Mrs. Murray Anderson, who had been picking huckleberries near the sandy ridge crossing of the Central Railroad of New Jersey.

Was In Lonely Spot.

Making their way along a rarely used path, the trio came upon parts of an airplane wing. Still further along they found a piece of the engine and then after circling a clump of trees they discovered the wreckage. (Continued on page 2)

Enjoyable Meeting Methodist W. F. M. S.

The Women's Foreign Missionary Society of the Methodist church, held its July meeting at the pleasant home of Mrs. Edward Dawson, 607 North Jefferson Avenue, Thursday, July 12. A good number of ladies were present considering the season of the year. The meeting opened with one of the old familiar hymns, Miss Callie Morgan, president, in the chair, Mrs. Ernest Cook at the piano. The devotional service was given by Mrs. H. D. Bills and Mrs. Baum. The Secretary read the minutes of the previous meeting and the treasurer gave a detailed report of the finances, for ten months of the year now so near its end. After the adjusting of some business matters, an unusually interesting program was given.

Miss Evelyn Street sang most charmingly. Joyful Kilmer's lovely poem, "A Tree" and responded to an enthusiastic encore with another dainty song. We were very fortunate in having Mrs. E. C. Lumsden, wife of our district superintendent, with us, who had spent the month of May with her husband, who was a delegate to the General Conference at Kansas City. She gave in her charming way an outline of the subject of the day, combining with it, interesting items heard at the conference. It was a wonderful opportunity to see a number of the Bishops from all parts of the country, and their no less interesting wives, many of them prominent officials in our different women's organizations. Then to see, and hear, native representatives, both men and women, from foreign countries, appearing as cultured, well educated, and capable of managing churches, schools, colleges, hospitals and orphanages, products of our missionaries love and labors presenting in forceful manner their needs, some financial, others economic, many educational, and all of them wishing for our love, counsel and help. What wonders hath our God wrought. An appropriate closing to this fine address was the interesting hymn, "The Light of the World is Jesus." Mrs. L. N. Deutsch, then gave in her interesting way three short selections, "Say Hello," a humorous description of a church anthem and "The Songs We Used to Sing, in the Old-fashioned Way."

The August meeting will occur at the Peck Orphanage, August 9. A picnic of the United Home and Foreign Women's Societies.

Popular Oregonites To Wed Sept. 1st.

Mrs. E. K. Laughlin, Oregon, Ill., entertained Thursday at a bridge-tea announcing the engagement of her daughter, Elizabeth, to George S. Mix, son of George H. Mix, Oregon. At the guests' places were individual cakes, the decorative frosting showing the names of the couple and the date of the wedding, September 1.

The bride-elect is a daughter of Attorney and Mrs. E. K. Laughlin. She is a graduate of the Oregon high school and the Ward Belmont school, New York.

Mr. Mix is also a graduate of Oregon high school and attended the University of Illinois. Since January of this year he has been associated with the Rockford National bank.

MENU for the FAMILY

BY SISTER MARY

Breakfast—Raspberries and cream, cereal, poached eggs with crisp bacon, toast, milk, coffee.

LUNCHEON—Spinach and egg salad, whole wheat bread, steamed cherry pudding, milk, tea.

DINNER—Watermelon cocktail, veal and rice rolls, hearts of romaine with French dressing, junket ice cream with chocolate sauce, plain cake, milk, coffee.

The luncheon pudding provides the only warm dish in the meal. It is quite "heartly" and adds bulk to an otherwise light menu.

Steamed Cherry Pudding
Two cups stoned cherries, 2 eggs, 1 cup granulated sugar, 1/2 cup molasses, 1/2 cup white flour, 1 1/4 cups Graham flour, 4 tablespoons butter, 1/2 cup hot water, 1 teaspoon soda, 1/2 teaspoon salt, 1/2 teaspoon cinnamon.

Cream butter and beat in sugar and molasses. Mix flour and add to first mixture. Add salt and cinnamon. Add eggs and beat and beat batter hard. Stir in cherries and add hot water with soda dissolved in it. Beat well and turn into a buttered mold. Steam two hours and serve with sugar and cream.

POINTERS FOR PARENTS

Salads are one of the foods which usually appeal to the grownups and for which a taste should be cultivated by the children.

Vegetable and fruit salad may be served to the latter if the dressing is not over-seasoned. Lemon juice should be used rather than vinegar with the oil. A mildly seasoned French dressing may be kept made up and used to serve the children.

The idea that we eat with teeth is older than our race; the idea that we eat for teeth is comparatively recent, says "Children, the Magazine for Parents." What foods build teeth? Obviously those which contain the materials of which teeth are made. Teeth and bone are made of lime, mostly and other minerals. Lime foods are milk, cheese, vegetables, fresh fruit, eggs, whole grain cereals and breads.

The parent should sing with the child, if she has any voice at all to sing with. "The Baby's Opera," published by Schirmer, "Small Songs for Small Singers," by Neidlinger; "Little Songs of Long Ago" by Moffett; collections of French and German children's songs, such as "Sang a Klang fur Kinderherz," "King, Klang, Gloria," "Gail-Cat Marions Nous," all furnish material distinguished for the fitness and poetic quality of the words, and the simplicity and musical distinction of the accompaniment.

It is not enough to teach children restraint in the use of money; such lessons alone would tend to develop a generation of misers.

The possession of money entails real responsibility. Children must learn that money represents effort, strength and a portion of the life of the person who earned it. They must be taught that money should be used to obtain values at least equal to the effort of earning. They need also to realize that it should provide not only for personal and family necessities, but for the needs of others, and for civic development.

Daughters of Union Veterans in Meeting

The Daughters of Union Veterans of the Civil War met in regular session Thursday afternoon in G. A. R. Hall.

The meeting opened in regular form. The Secretary's and Treasurer's reports were given, also various committee reports. Two new committees were appointed by the president. During the business session Miss Bess Decker was installed as chaplain. The president announced that the Daughters would present a flag to the Nachusa Orphanage, on Sunday, July 22nd. The flag is to be presented at the morning service at the Lutheran church at Nachusa. It was decided also at this meeting to hold a picnic July 27th at the home of Mrs. Florence Ommen. The meeting closed in regular form.

St. James Aid Society Held Meeting

The St. James Aid Society met at the home of Mrs. Frank Cramer Wednesday, with Mrs. Lievan and Mrs. Lehman assisting Mrs. Cramer in entertaining. The ladies served a chicken and noodle dinner to which all did justice. The day was spent in sewing. In the afternoon, the meeting was conducted by the president, Mrs. Topper.

Plans were made to hold the picnic for the Aid Society at the Ambrosia park, July 22nd, to which all Aid members, their families and friends are invited. The meeting closed with all repeating the Lord's Prayer.

The WOMAN'S DAY by ALLENE SUMNER

I have no objections to either modern or old-fashioned wives. I have no criticism to make of the woman who believes that just home and house is not a full-time, self-respecting job for any woman of this modern world. And I have no condemnation or contempt for the woman who believes that no job is so important as making a home.

Either viewpoint is a natural product of circumstance and individual temperament, and either viewpoint is probably best for the owner.

But I do have contempt and scorn for a woman who tries to eat her cake and have it, too; who insists on being "modern" till it's more convenient not to be, then proceeds to make a fetish and martyr complex from the very course she voluntarily assumes.

All of us have known wives, for instance, who prattle about house-keeping being a moron's job; about the loss of self-respect they would have for themselves if supported by a man, et al, et al.

Nine times out of ten they take this viewpoint not because of any mental conviction but because they much prefer the fun of dressing up and going out to work and gossiping with the other girls in the office, going out to an attractive tea room for lunch, and seeing what's new in the shops, to staying home in dull loneliness and doing work not nearly so pleasant.

But they have a little habit of construing their own selfish choice into an hardship whenever they want to. Husband may complain about a sketchy dinner. Then comes an outburst from the martyr complex:

"What do you think I am, anyway? An old work horse? Expect me to drudge downtown all day and keep up a house the way your mother did when it was all she had to do?"

"It's almost enough for a woman to support herself without doing a double job of keeping house, too!"

If the husband meekly interrupts that it isn't necessary for her to support herself and that he'd be only too glad to do it, he'll draw:

"Yes, you would, and how! Keep me in cotton stockings and gingham dresses, I suppose!"

This makes me boil. Consistently, modern wives who elect their viewpoint and stick to it whether or not it's convenient to do so, get my whole-hearted acceptance.

But inconsistent "modern wives" who use theories and mental acceptances and rejections as mere alibis, and who are merely doing the thing they selfishly prefer to do as long as it is to their advantage, and martyrize themselves when that comes in handy, too, engage only my contempt.

Bridge Made Easy

TAKING OUT A NO TRUMP—2
When your partner bids a no-trump it is most important to visualize his hand. The initial no-trump only guarantees the holding of the minimum requirement for a no-trump. You also have the right to assume that the declarer is not blank in a suit and does not hold a worthless singleton. There is no guarantee, however, that the no-trumper is without a worthless doubleton.

You may also mirror the declarer's hand as not holding a sound major suit bid, as preference in bidding is given to a sound major rather than to a no trump.

There is no ruffing when the hand is played at no trump. The highest cards take the tricks. If you hold high cards, evenly distributed, as four-three-three-three, it is usually unnecessary to make any declaration. With your hand fits in with your partner's no trump and your cards help your partner make game, you should cooperate with him and pass.

If, however, your hand contains a blank suit or a singleton or worthless doubleton there is always present the danger that opponents may be so strong in the missing suit that they will run that suit before your partner can obtain the lead. It is often found that the declarer is weak in the very suit in which you are short.

Some experts under certain conditions and when holding certain high cards declare a four-card suit, to take out in a four-card suit, but these occasions are so rare that they may be relegated to the experts.

As a general rule the average player ought not to be concerned with taking out a no-trump unless holding a suit of five or more cards.

WERE ENTERTAINED AT NORMAN MILLER HOME—

Mr. and Mrs. John Kauffman and little daughter of Minot, North Dakota, stopped for an over night visit at the home of their cousins, Mr. and Mrs. Norman Miller, on Thursday, on their way home from a motor trip to Pennsylvania.

Dixon Woman's Club Annual Picnic Was Enjoyed

The annual picnic of the Dixon Woman's Club, always anticipated with pleasure, was held Friday afternoon at the Assembly Park Hotel Annex.

A business session was called to order by the president at 3:30 in the hotel parlors, during which next year's work was outlined and many interesting and worth while programs planned. Artists of note have been secured by the committees of each of the six departments, with one evening meeting, featuring Dr. Preston Bradley of Chicago, noted minister and lecturer. The newly elected chairmen are as follows:

Art—Mrs. David Marks.
Literature—Mrs. John Weiss.
American Home—Mrs. Florence White.

Child Welfare and Public Health—Mrs. H. D. Bills.

Community Service—Mrs. Louis Franks.

Music—Mrs. C. C. Rorick.
An appetizing and bounteous picnic supper was served at 6:30 to members and families with a satisfactory attendance.

Thanks and appreciation of those present, was voiced to the committee in charge, consisting of: Mesdames Stauffer, Street, Rickard, Demarest, Lund, March, Kaylor.

Short Interviews With Famous Women

"A one track mind is necessary to success," declared Naomi Johnson, Ziegfeld dancer, who now is a principal in "The Three Musketeers."

"Promotion only comes to those who interpret every 'no' to mean a 'yes' where their careers are concerned," she said.

"So many girls allow their entire careers to be spoiled because they become discouraged at first. A girl sets out with high hopes to seek an important post, only to be confronted with the fact that a thousand other girls are after the same job."

"In 90 cases out of 100, the aspirant is discouraged and persuaded to take some lesser position. If she takes 'no' seriously, she soon will drift into oblivion. The thing that separates those 10 potential successes from the 90 others is their persistence, ability to hurdle all obstacles to success."

"A superiority complex is not necessary. Grit, determination, a fighting spirit and hard work are. These from a four-leaf clover of success. Keep them with you and you will recognize 'opportunity' when it comes your way. You will also be able to combat, successfully, the rough spots."

"Don't let anyone put you off by saying you are too short, too tall, too dark or too light. Keep banging on the door until you are given a chance. And keep in tip-toe trim so you can rush to success when the door opens."

PRINTED CAFES MATCH AFTERNOON DRESSES—

Paris (AP)—One of the large Paris houses which devotes much of its summer collection to airy printed chiffons has introduced a novel variation.

With afternoon dresses in pastel colored print for garden party wear, this house adds a cape of the same material which is really a magnified scarf. With graceful manipulation it takes on the guise of a wrap to match and makes the dress suitable for more informal wear.

BLOND LACE DRESS WINS SHOW PRIZE—

Paris (AP)—A dress of blond lace embroidered in gold and veiled with blond tulle won the Grand Prix of Feminine Elegance at Paris' annual style show this year.

Mme. Yolande Lafon wore the dress which was awarded the prize of $4,000 and a gold and ivory trophy. The fashion show attracted 50 of the best known stage personages as contestants.

Elks Get Welcome at Miami

Looks as if the girls are in what the novelists might call a precarious position, doesn't it? However, the elk is a "good elk" and will not run away with them. The girls mounted the elk during the Grand Lodge B. P. O. E. convention at Miami. They are, left to right: Marjorie Heatly, Carolyn Losler, Marian Riordan and Billie Johnson.

Kingdom Missionary Society Meeting

The Women's Missionary Society of the Kingdom church met Friday afternoon with Mrs. Leonard Stevens. The meeting was called to order at 2:30 with roll call and minutes of former meeting read and approved. It was decided to send a box to the Bethany Mission Home in Kentucky at this time. Miss Lina Miller is one of the teachers in this mission. A vocal solo by Miss Lucia McWehly and Scripture reading from 12th Corinthians by the president, was followed by the discussion of the subject from the study book on Racial Attitude. After prayer all were dismissed, to meet with Mrs. Allen Sanford in August. A social hour was enjoyed and the hostess served refreshments, assisted by Mrs. Ommen, Miss McWehly and Mrs. Gates.

TO ENJOY PICNIC AT OLIVER PORTNER HOME IN GRAND DETOUR—

The Veterans of Foreign Wars, their Auxiliary and the War Mothers will hold a picnic at the Oliver Portner home in Grand Detour, Sunday, July 15. They will meet at Union Hall at 10 o'clock. Those who have no means of conveyance will find transportation there. For further information call the president, Marie Eattinger, at K1294.

The Telegraph was misinformed as to the place of holding the picnic in Friday evening's paper.

Mr. and Mrs. Francis Gorman and Mr. and Mrs. Lee Lindsey left this morning by automobile for Hayward, Wis., where they will enjoy a vacation outing at the Telegraph Dixon Beach property at Grindstone Lake, where they expect to stay a week.

ENJOYED VISIT AT BLACKMAN HOME—

Mrs. Bell McCormack has returned to her home in Chicago after a two months' visit at the Lew Blackman home. Mrs. McCormack formerly lived in Dixon, and her many friends here were glad to have her with them again in her visit.

WERE DINNER GUESTS LAST EVENING—

Mr. and Mrs. E. N. Howell entertained at dinner last evening Mrs. Alice Beede, Mrs. Warren Saunders and Mrs. Richard Shipley Newlin. Miss Norton, of Boston, cousin of Mrs. Howell, who is her house guest this summer, was also present.

Farewell Party for Mr. and Mrs. Gerdès

Mr. and Mrs. Ben Gerdès, 1031 W. Fourth street, were pleasantly surprised on Thursday evening when they were tendered a farewell party by a number of their friends, who presented them with a beautiful bridge lamp with many good wishes, as a reminder of friends in Dixon. Mr. and Mrs. Gerdès are leaving soon for St. Louis, where they will make their future home. Mr. Gerdès for the past eight years, has held a position as foreman at the Brown Shoe Co. in Dixon, until recently. The evening was spent in music and games. Delicious refreshments were served. Those who enjoyed the happy evening were:

Mr. and Mrs. John H. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Leslie R. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. W. Fox, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Downs, Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Reisinger and Messrs. Leroy Smith, Wm. Carr, Edwin Bollinger, Chicago, John E. Hilbert, Edward Beach, La-verne Reisinger, Glen Large, Fredrick Starkey.

WERE GUESTS AT MISSMAN HOME LAST EVENING—

Last evening Mrs. Clara Seiring and Miss Dorothy Husbey of New Richmond, Minn., were guests in the home of Mr. and Mrs. M. W. Missman of Brinton avenue, on their way east on a motor trip, to New Haven, Conn. They will visit in Boston, also and will return by the way of Chicago and Milwaukee.

MRS. WALTER I. CAROLUS AND DAUGHTER HERE—

Mrs. Walter I. Carolus of Sterling and her daughter Annabelle, were here yesterday visiting her sister, Mrs. Edward McCleary of Turlock, Cal., who is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Barlow, who are in Sterling at the Dr. Walter Carolus home.

WHAT JOHN D. TYPIFIES.

John D. Rockefeller has passed another milestone. He is 89 years old now, and the columns of space given his birthday by the daily papers testify to the power of his name as a symbol.

The name, Rockefeller, has almost ceased to mean an individual, with human likes, desires and frailties. For more than a generation it has stood for great wealth; when we hear it we think, in passing, of a spare, slightly withered old man—but most of all we think of a mighty fortune. To all intents and purposes, no man can go higher along the path of getting money than Rockefeller has gone.

That is quite proper; for Rockefeller was supremely typical of the era in which he rose to power. Future generations will find in the story of his life a very adequate history of the customs, morals, conditions and ideals of America in the great Gilded Age.

Rockefeller began life as a poor man's son—a very poor man's son. He started his career as a clerk on starvation wages. From the beginning he knew what he wanted; every act of his life was devoted to gaining his end. His climb began slowly, then gathered momentum rapidly; a dizzy rush upward followed, in which competitors were ruthlessly wrecked or absorbed, while the Rockefeller fortune became a vast, overshadowing giant, holding almost unlimited power over money and men.

Many men admired him; many more hated him. And this hatred arose not so much from a dislike of his business methods as from a dim, subconscious sort of feeling that no one man ought to have so much power. Democratic America, that began as a nation of farmers and woodsmen, had developed into a nation of industry and finance. Rockefeller saw the implications before anyone else, and acted on them. His rise symbolized, to the average man, an unwelcome change in American conditions, and for long his name was anathema.

All of that has changed. In his old age Rockefeller has won the public's affection. Pictures of him and stories about him are always received eagerly by newspaper readers. He is one of America's most popular figures.

That changed attitude is generally ascribed to his great benefactions. Unquestionably he has used his wealth wisely and well. Yet it seems that there is another reason. The country has accepted the change that has come upon it. It has discovered that industrialization does not necessarily mean the end of all the old American virtues. It has learned that dominance by bank, factory and railroad brings new advantages as well as new problems.

Rockefeller's change from a ruthless, hard-hitting business captain to a serene, kindly old man, seeking to do as much good as he can for his fellows, is typical of the change that has come over the country as a whole. High finance and big business are no longer bugbears. We have developed and we have grown wiser. Like Rockefeller, we have reached maturity.

Planes flying with the president's mail from Brule, Wis., have been forced to land, unable to defeat the winds. Why don't they train one of those Brule River mosquitoes to carry the route?

No wonder the movies started to talk, after all those years of listening to people reading the subtitles. It was enough to make the movies cry right out loud.

The Republicans didn't do a thing about it, and we don't think the Democrats will—we mean relief for the other seven teams in the American League.

Then there was the delegate who came home and told his wife he looked like that because he slipped on a wet plank.

In olden days they used to kiss and make up; now the make-up comes ahead of everything.

A scientist has removed the bark of a dog in Seattle. Send the man to Washington.

America is a country where they lock up juries and let the defendants out.

"I can't marry every man I know," Peggy Joyce replied to a newspaper interviewer's question the other day. She might have said, "but I can try."

THE TINYMITES

STORY BY HAL COCHRAN—PICTURES BY KNICK

(READ THE STORY, THEN COLOR THE PICTURE.)

The Tynmites began to cheer. "Oh, make that hippo come out here," said Clowney, as the hippo opened up its mouth real wide. "His back's as slippery as can be. If you will call him out here, we will feed him grass, and then we'll hop upon his back and slide."

"That's fair enough," the hunter said. "But don't get too near to his head. His teeth are very sharp, and I would be sad if he should bite. Just treat him nice and feed him well, and he can very shortly tell that you are friendly Tynmites, and all will be all right."

The hunter made a funny sound. The hippo looked and splashed around. And then he ambled up on the bank and slumped down in the sand. "Oh, my, but he is big and strong. I wonder how he walks along," said Scouty as he started pulling grass up with his hand.

The Tynmites then fed the beast. And then their interest was increased when Mister Hunter said, "I'll build a little seat for you. We'll tie it on the hippo tight. Then everything will be all right for you to take a ride on him. That will be something new." The Tynmites gathered limbs nearby, and soon began to puff and sigh. They all worked hard to help the hunter build the little seat. In about an hour the thing was done. Then Clowney cried, "Now for some fun! If fatty hippo lets us strap it on, 'twill be a treat."

"Oh, I'll do that," the hunter said. And then he promptly went ahead and tied the seat real safe and sound. It was a dandy scheme. The Tynmites quickly jumped right in, and then they all began to grin as fatty hippo splashed right out and started down the stream.

HEALTH AND DIET ADVICE
By Dr. Frank McCoy
"The Fast Way to Health"

QUESTIONS IN REGARD TO HEALTH & DIET WILL BE ANSWERED BY DR. MCCOY WHO CAN BE ADDRESSED IN CARE OF THIS PAPER. ENCLOSE STAMPED ADDRESS ENVELOPE FOR REPLY.

Dr. McCoy, Los Angeles specialist, will gladly answer personal questions on health and diet, addressed to him, care of The Telegraph. Enclose stamped, addressed large envelope for reply.

Dr. McCoy's Menu suggested for the week beginning Sunday, July 15:

Sunday
Breakfast—Coddled eggs, Melba toast, ripe figs and cream.
Lunch—French artichoke, McCoy salad (lettuce, tomatoes and cucumbers).
Dinner—Broiled chicken, zucchini (small Italian squash), Salad of raw asparagus tips eaten as celery, chilled avocado cream.

Monday
Breakfast—Baked stuffed apple, with cream if desired.

*STUFFED CELERY: Mix with peanut butter the desired quantities of minced ripe olives, chopped parsley, and enough of the pulp drained from canned tomatoes to make a smooth paste. Work ingredients together with a fork and fill the grooves of crisp, well bleached celery stalks of uniform length. Place on ice for a little while before serving.

FATS, PROTEINS, AND CARBOHYDRATES

If we wish to have a correctly balanced diet, it is necessary that we understand the different food classifications and their use in the body. Since the starches are apt to cause the most trouble I have listed all starch foods in one group, even if they also contain protein. I have not listed them in the proteins, as is sometimes done by dietitians who do not understand food combinations.

One of the difficulties which I frequently encounter is in teaching people not to combine acids with starches. Patients will sometimes complain that the combinations were not good for them and I may find upon inquiry that they combined tomatoes with peas, under the impression that tomatoes are not a fruit and that peas are protein.

Protein food is the most important material for building and repairing the body cells. If more protein is used than is necessary for this, it can be converted into energy. Protein is found in the protoplasm of every living thing. After extensive experiment, I have been able to classify the proteins into the following classification with regard to their use in the body.

Good proteins are lean beef, mutton, chicken, turkey, rabbit, fresh fish, such as sole, halibut, black bass, cod, perch and tuna, eggs, cream and cottage cheese, gelatin, frog legs, turtle, and milk.

Fair proteins are dried beef, pork, fresh tongue, veal, lamb, wild fowl, salted cod, salmon, lobster, clams, shrimp, oysters, crawfish, nuts, mackerel, domestic goose, ducks and crab.

The not advisable proteins are kidney, lungs, liver, smoked tongue, sausage, hot dogs, bologna, brains, burned beef, sweet breads, pickled pig's feet, limburger cheese, canned meat and fish, salt mackerel, hamburger, steak, or dried beans.

Carbohydrates include both starches and sugars. The majority of people use far more starch than their bodies require, producing fermentation, stomach acidity, biliousness, catarrh, tonsillitis, throat trouble, skin eruptions, liver and kidney disorders. Starch is not essential to life, and I obtain better results with sick people by eliminating it from their diets until they regain their health. It may be used in moderate amounts by healthy people, provided they will take the pains of properly masticating it so that the salivary may have an opportunity to act upon the starch before the latter enters the stomach. Starches should never be used at the same meal with acid food, and seldom with proteins. Those with strong digestions may usually take a small amount of real wholewheat bread with the ordinary meal of good combinations.

The good starches are potatoes, green corn, macaroni, spaghetti, vermicelli, noodles, Hubbard squash, rice, cornbread, cornmeal, wholewheat biscuits, wholewheat flour, gluten bread, Shredded Wheat, barley, canned corn, water crackers, large carrots, turnips, parsnips and beets. The starches include all of the cereal products, bananas, peas, dried beans, tapioca, sago, potatoes, and most of the fully developed root tubers.

Sugars combine better than the starches, and may be recognized by their taste. Fats and oils, or hydrocarbons, are present in most seeds, especially nuts, also fatty meat, cream, butter, avocados, olives and palm fruit. This may be used in limited quantity for heating and lubrication.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

QUESTION: E. S. writes: "I am 35 years of age and have never snored before, but it is becoming something regular with me the last year or so. I shall appreciate it very much if you will advise me in regard to your treatment of fasting and dieting."

ANSWER: Snoring is usually caused by inability to breathe freely through the nose while you are sleeping. This is because of an inflamed condition of the membrane inside of the nose which is engorged with catarrhal mucus. As soon as you get rid of your catarrh through living on the proper diet, your family will be delighted to notice that you are no longer snoring.

QUESTION: Annette asks: "How did Roquefort cheese get its name?"

ANSWER: This cheese was named after the French village of Roquefort where special herds of sheep traditionally graze. The milk is pastured. Much care is given to the diet of these sheep, and even the water that is supplied is whitened with barley flour. Roquefort cheese, itself, goes through a very long process of preparation before it reaches the market. It is, however, a very good protein food when used in proper combination with other foods.

QUESTION: V. L. writes: "So much saliva comes from my stomach it irritates my mouth and it is always supplied. What should I eat to prevent this acid stomach?"

ANSWER: Saliva is formed in the mouth and does not come from the stomach. The gastric juice of the stomach is acid and will irritate your gums if it comes into the mouth. Live on good food combinations to overcome the hyperacidity of the stomach.

QUESTION: Mrs. R. W. writes: "I have had the itch now for six months. All the baths, soaps and ointments do not cure or help me, and I am most anxious to have relief from this trouble."

ANSWER: Every kind of itch which does not come from an outside infection can be cured by dieting. The main change is to regulate your food combinations so as to overcome excess acidity which is the principal cause of any acidosis which produces skin irritation.

QUESTION: N. O. R. asks: "Is chewing gum ever beneficial?"

ANSWER: Chewing gum is beneficial to the gums, increasing the circulation of blood through these parts. Those who are troubled with excessive gas will sometimes notice that they have more gas when chewing gum. This is due to the swallowing of the saliva which contains an alkali called ptyalin. This makes carbon dioxide gas as it comes in contact with the stomach acid. This difficulty can be avoided if the saliva is not swallowed.

QUESTION: N. J. H. writes: "I have been troubled for a number of years with my back hurting. My trouble is just to the right of my backbone and has marked where the pain is."

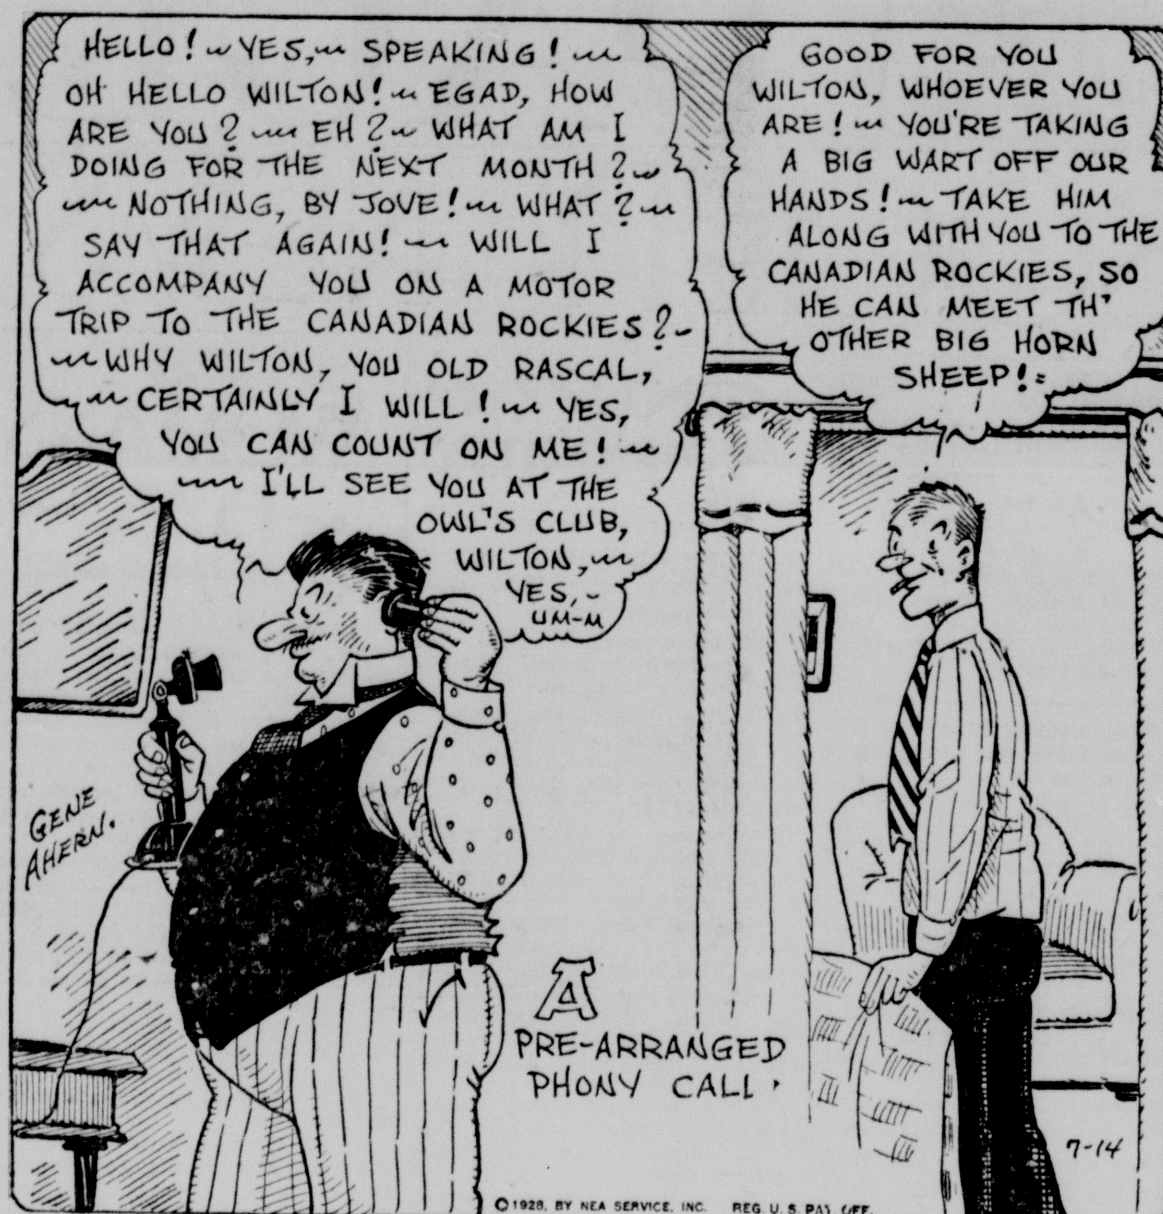

ANSWER: The cross on your diagram marks the place in your back where pain often develops from kidney stones, gall stones, or gas pockets in the colon. Only a careful diagnosis would tell just what is causing your particular trouble.

DONOR OF LOWELL PARK THEME FOR MEMORIAL STORY

Kansas Education Has Beautiful Tribute to Amy Lowell

A recent issue of the Co-operative School Bulletin contained the following "In Memoriam" of Miss Amy Lowell, donor of Lowell Park to the City of Dixon in honor of her father. The article, by Dr. P. C. Somerville of Kansas Wesleyan University, who was a speaker at a recent session of the Lee County Teachers' Institute, is as follows:

Down deep in our hearts, we are hero-worshippers. Figuratively speaking, we stand about with wide open eyes gazing upon those who have become a power in the world. To us they seem surrounded by an atmosphere of romance and glitter. Among the millions of people, there are a few outstanding personalities—those who have made names for themselves. These towering personalities are sighted from afar by the hero-worshipping public, which greets them with praise or with blame. With little accurate knowledge concerning these heroes, we talk about them. Anxious for a conception of their personal characteristics, we invent such and conjure up a vision which partly satisfies our curiosity. Our public is interested in its poets as well as in its presidential aspirants. Three years have passed since the death of Amy Lowell and during that time she has become more endeared to the literary and reading public.

To discover her true self it is safest to turn to those who knew her. As for her physical appearance, Esther Brock Bird draws for us a living, lovable woman. She was stout with a round face and black hair pulled high in an old-fashioned pompadour. Her eyes snapped and danced. Her manner was somewhat abrupt, and because of her power of rapid thinking she was intolerant of stupidity. Her voice was charming and she possessed a kindness of manner, she always entertained her friends with her vivacious and interesting conversation.

Even though her appearance did not suggest it, Amy Lowell was the descendant of a long line of distinguished ancestors. It is very appropriate that a descendant of James Lowell should have such a brilliant career. Her mother's father, Abbott Lawrence, was ambassador to England; John Lowell was a member of the continental congress; Charles Lowell was the ancestor of three generations who were successively heads of Lowell Institute at Boston. The last of these, Abbott Lawrence Lowell, is now president of Harvard, while another brother, Percival Lowell, is a well known astronomer.

Private tuition and travel abroad formed the education of this curiously intellectual child. She visited France, Egypt, Turkey and Greece. These visits later bore fruit in the exotic colors of her verse. The vivid colors of these tropical countries form the motif of her writing. As a child, she was one of those precocious young girls who had vague aspirations for writing, and she was always exercising her vivid imagination.

When Miss Lowell was twenty-eight years of age she decided that she would be a poet. For the next eight years, she worked very earnestly and steadily. She spent those years reading the classics of all languages, studying the technique of verse, and developing her verbal powers. During this apprenticeship she refused to publish a single line. Carefully and methodically she set about learning her trade, for she believed that a poet must learn his trade with the same care as a cabinet maker.

To know best what Miss Lowell was, we need visit the Lowell home at Seveneils, for this old home was very COMFORTABLY ENSCONCED in a chair perched in the bow of a canoe, Fisherman Coolidge, celebrating his fifty-sixth birthday, is shown as he was about to embark from the dock in front of his Summer White House at Cedar Island, Wis. characteristic of our poet. Loving the picturesque old homestead with its her personality. The whole an intense devotion, she expressed in estate was spacious in appearance and Miss Lowell's pride in the dignified old place was intense. Once she said about it: "One could easily put the whole grove in one's pocket, but as a child it seemed limitless to me." An illusion of space is caused by the beautiful vistas, the sunken gardens rich with flowers of exotic colors and great-clipt hemlocks. Seveneils is ten "acres of paradise enclosed in a low wall of pudding-stone." In later years the old colonial house was replaced by a brownstone mansion. She always declared that the house was a "blot on the place, but that triumphant wisteria vine was yearly doing its best to conceal it." In reality, the house is a great dignified, gracious structure surrounded by lovely lawns. Because of her love for gardening, she spent much time among her beautiful flowers. In her garden she cherished several rare azalea bushes which had been sent to her grandfather from France.

The inside of her house was even more characteristic of this rare woman than the grounds. The library was the heart of the house extending the length of it and characterized by charm and distinction. Bookshelves lined the wall space and the room was simply bursting with books. Shadowy heights, rare rugs, and glowing colors—such was the room always with its background of books, books, and then more books.

Such was the lower part of this remarkable house. But most of the poet's life was spent in the upper rooms of her home. Here, with only a yellow cat for company she turned night into day, as she worked from midnight till dawn. This habit reveals her nervous excitable disposition which was partly concealed by her masculine, decided manner. Thus her real work was all accomplished after the rest of the world was quiet and could not disturb her.

Now that we have thus viewed the Lowell home and library, let us make the acquaintance of this remarkable woman. Since her death many of her friends have revealed what they knew of her personality. One tells of being invited to the home of a lady who was a patron of arts. When the meal was far advanced, the door opened. A large, dominant woman

CAL GOES FISHING—AND CATCHES 'EM TOO

OUT ON THE BEAUTIFUL BRULE RIVER, reward came quickly to Mr. Coolidge. The richly stocked stream seemed full of trout eager to do honor to the chief executive's angling ability. entered briskly and bravely. It was the custom of late guests to a dinner to enter cringingly, murmuring excuses. But not Amy Lowell, for this was she. She did not sink to her seat with a muttered apology. No! she made some quick, brisk explanation and sat down with an air of confidence taking the reins of the conversation. From that moment she was the leader; the other guests following her thought with alacrity. Her remarks were witty, pertinent, and always deft.

It was her custom to hold delightful symposiums after dinner. Reclining on a couch in the center of a group of devoted disciples, she would lead a discussion which would last until midnight. This was the source of her reputation as a conversationalist. All those who ever knew Miss Lowell accord her the name of a great conversationalist with a master mind. From these symposiums she retired to her home to spend the wee small hours in diligent labor.

During these nights of toil, our poet was writing the poetry which would bring her fame. She has often been pictured as the drum major of a band of imagists and free-verse exponents or as a propagandist marching boldly at the head of her band, amidst a blare of trumpets. In this group of poets, her large, commanding figure, her masculine energy, and her intense application to her work, made her particularly outstanding. But she stood out especially, because she was always herself, and remained so till her death, in spite of outraged conservatives and outrageous modernists.

Blessed with a brilliant imagination and extraordinary powers of inventiveness, she was well equipped to start forth on a poetic career. Her inventiveness is displayed in her forms of verse and in the imagery with which she clothed her feelings and ideas. Colors, scents, textures, and outlines of life are her materials. With these materials she makes her vivid descriptions of moods and her swiftly moving stories. Her poetry shows a desire for exactness, and a keen power of analysis. The frequent mention of garden flowers shows her intense love and appreciation for them. These lines from "Lilacs" indicate her descriptive power and vivid presentation of images.

"Lilacs, wind-beaten, staggering under a lopsided shock of bloom; Lilacs in the dooryards Holding quiet conversation with an early moon."

Miss Lowell did not possess talent for painting but her sense of color and color combinations was acute. Few of her poems are not abounding in delightful colors. She used her poems for canvas and her words for pigments. These she skillfully blended into bright and entirely charming pictures. In "Patterns" she speaks of her train making "a pink and silver stain on the gravel" of "blue and yellow flowers standing proudly in the sun". Patterns were her specialty. She was fond of screens and surfaces and bejeweled them lavishly. For example, notice this colorful vision:

"Red foxgloves against a yellow wall streaked with plum-colored shadows; A lady with a blue and red sunshade; The slow dash of waves on a parapet."

In contrast to Miss Lowell's masculine appearance, she expressed in her poetry a sensitive, aesthetic femininity. She is really a noble, lovely woman at heart. Her understanding and sympathy for the longing and dreams of humanity is subtly and delicately expressed with infinitely pathos in "The Paper Windmill." She draws a picture of a disconsolate, little boy among his worn-out toys, longing for something different. Seeing a windmill vendor, he thought he had found the object of his longing in a silver windmill with a big ring of blue which whirled merrily in the breeze. But when it was in his hand, it was only a bit of crumpled paper on the end of a stick. In this little story written in polyphonic prose, she shows a true understanding of the world's ambitions and disappointments. How often a hard-won trophy turns to dust in our hands, and how often we regret the sacrifices which were necessary for certain accomplishments.

The critics have not always been kind to Miss Lowell. You will recall from a study of history, that critics usually have not been kind to innovators. There are always those who cling to the aged present and who rail against anyone who dares to suggest a change. Critics agree that she was known for her vigorous character. This characteristic is revealed by quotations from her letters. To a friend who had asked for her criticism, she wrote, "I remember your saying once that you did not want mealy-mouthed reviews, so you will not mind this being a bit of a slam. I hope you like it as you usually do mine."

And about a poet who had been ungracious toward her, she wrote, "I should like to give him a good thrashing." No doubt it can be maintained that this living, breathing woman was so far ahead of her work that the value of her poetry is due to her dynamic personality rather than to any inspiration in the verse itself.

Soon after the publication of her biography on "John Keats", Miss Lowell was entertained at a dinner given by her Boston friends. Here she received the congratulations of her contemporaries, old and young. In reply, she read "Lilacs", which closes with a tribute to her native country. As she read her usually firm and resonant voice faltered. At last, after years of waiting, she saw the world applauding. Success was achieved but it was almost too late. She had planned to leave soon for a tour of England, but a few weeks later she was dead.

Such a dynamic, forceful personality as hers will always leave a "vacant place against the sky" as it disappears. It is hard to imagine the magnificent Brookline house without its mistress. "One cannot help but wonder about the flowers and birds in the garden, the ashes on the hearth in the silent library, the incomplete manuscripts, the bright poems that have gone down to smoulder like jewels in the dark." But even so, the world is so much the better for her sojourn among us and with bowed heads we pass by this third anniversary of her leaving us for the "poet's paradise."

HIGH COMPRESSION

MOTOR

12 Spark Plugs [Airplane Type] instead of 6

The new "Twin Ignition" motor, in the new Advanced and Special Nash "400" models, is a truly amazing development in power.

It is a high-compression motor, with two ignition coils, instead of one, two spark plugs per cylinder, instead of one, 360 sparks per second at top speed, instead of 180, to thoroughly and economically burn the highly-compressed gases.

It sets a precedent in motor performance among all motor cars.

Nash "400" Advanced Six models are now capable of 75 to 80 miles per hour with no effort at all.

Nash "400" Special Six models do 70 to 75 with consummate ease.

Another major advantage of the "Twin Ignition" motor is economy—more power, more speed, less gasoline.

Drive a new Nash "400" and you'll see what Twin-Ignition and high compression have done to give the world a new and finer motor car.

GIANT BEACON MAY BE SEEN 100 MILES OUT FROM CHICAGO

Builders Believe Dixon
People Can See New Air Port Light

Sunday evening it will be a case of "eyes to the east" for on that evening Dixon will be linked with Chicago by light which is another link that persons have not given a thought until it is right here. The two cities nearly 100 air miles apart have been linked by land, water and air and Sunday rays from a giant beacon which will be turned on for the first time, will be visible here according to the reckoning of constructing engineers.

The light is to give a new impetus to Chicago's plans to make that city the world's greatest airport center and the Chicago Central Aerial Beacon, on top of the Roanoke Tower in the city's loop district will be lighted for the first time.

This is the largest aerial beacon in the world and should be visible to fliers for a radius of more than 100 miles. It is located 520 feet above the sidewalks. The dedication will be held from the north steps of the Field Museum in Grant Park. There will be two bands, the Naval Band from the United States Naval Training Station, Great Lakes, Ill., and Schiff's Aerial Beacon band will play martial airs for the occasion. Planes from the National Air Transport Co., and the Grey Goose Air Lines will circle the beacon.

The exercises will start at 8 p. m. and the beacon light will be turned on about 9 p. m. by William P. MacCracken, Jr., Assistant Secretary of Commerce for Aeronautics.

Country wide interest has been added to the occasion by a request to twenty-five mayors or more of as many cities to appoint committees to watch for the light and report its visibility in the 100 mile radius in four states from certain altitudes.

THE RULES

1—The idea of letter golf is to change one word to another and do it in four, a given number of strokes. Thus to change COW to HEN, in three strokes, COW, HOW, HEW, HEN.

2—You can change only one letter at a time.

3—You must have a complete word, of common usage, for each pump. Slang words and abbreviations don't count.

4—The order of letters cannot be changed.

Maybe They Thought Nomination Would Go to His Head

When Governor Al Smith took time off from his campaign plans to make his annual pilgrimage to the Boy Scout camp at Bear Mountain, New York, he found the reception committee in their best Indian attire—though far too young for Tammany—waiting to present him with a brown derby four feet high and five feet around the brim. Lower is Al, with a baton, playing drum major. Barron Collier marches at the left; Commander Richard E. Byrd and Alfred Smith, Jr., are on the other side. In the upper picture the presentation is shown while left (below) the Democratic candidate turns drum major, leading the Scout Band and (right) he participates in some of their gymnastics.

maintained a bachelor, yet devoted his life to the welfare of children.

This celebrated surgeon of Paris wrote, in 1864, "It should be stated that, when it comes to the operation on children, the task claims from the surgeon the most exact knowledge of anatomy, for the regions being of less extent and the spaces smaller, it is often necessary to limit the incision and to give them only such dimensions as are absolutely necessary. For example, the neck of a child of two years who must have a tracheotomy performed does not allow the same field for action as in the adult. The incision of the perineum, in a patient of the same age, demands more care on the part of the surgeon in the performance of lithotomy. In short we should be well persuaded of a fact of which many persons seem ignorant, that operations are more difficult in children than at a more advanced age."

He knew what he was talking about. Educated in the College of Louis le Grand, then in the medical college, and for four years under the tutelage of the world-famous Dupuytren, he received from his father, a noted physician, a special education in the diseases of children. Beginning in 1840, Paul Guersant gave the first systematic course of lectures and clinics ever given upon the surgical diseases of children, and continued his courses annually until 1860.

Availing himself of the knowledge which had been accumulating for ages, he added his own experience, and he knew that surgery as it pertains to children has many peculiarities different from the surgery of adults.

The undeveloped but constantly changing anatomy and physiology, the different diseases and disorders found in the child and the different manner in which diseases act in the young organism require especial knowledge and training besides that of surgery in general in adults.

If Guersant could live today he would be astonished at the progress that has been made. He would be delighted to know that there are surgeons devoting themselves particularly to the surgery of children, but he would still say that "the task claims the most exact knowledge" and that "we should be well persuaded of a fact of which many persons seem ignorant, that operations are more difficult in children than at a more advanced age."

MARYE and "MOM" Their Letters

BY RUTH DEWEY GROVE

Dear Marye:

It's superfluous advice, my child, to ask you to look where you are going, or to stop any adventure that promises excitement and thrills, so I suppose I might just as well warn you to be careful this summer.

Rather, I should remember that you usually land on both feet, though you usually cause your spectators a few breathless minutes before you do. I wish Alan did not trust you so implicitly—I mean, I wish he did not give you so much leeway. The old-fashioned man who protected his wife and daughters seems to me much wiser in the long run, than the man who gives them unlimited freedom.

For I think you are right when you say it is usually the idea of the intrigue, rather than the man himself, that prompts you to be reckless. And if you once got the idea that intrigue and marriage do not go hand in hand, you might subvert your desire for heart entanglements.

And since you realize how wholly ceasable Alan is, and how superior he is to most of the men you knew before or since, it seems incredible to me how you play fast and loose with his devotion.

You ought to have children, Marye. Nothing gives a woman such a sense of values, or such a perspective on what is important and what is trivial in life, as having to consider the future and the welfare of those dependent on her.

The difficulty with so many modern marriages, as I see it, is the lack of mutual dependence.

So the modern marriage has to hang together with much less foundation than the old one had. It may be better, but I doubt it. There's nothing like the feeling that someone else needs you and is dependent upon you, to keep you from selfishness and flightiness.

Yesterday afternoon Mrs. Morgan and I went out on a buying expedition. She has definitely decided to open the antique shop, even though I have not decided to go in with her. I shall help her at first, and see how I like it.

We bought some very interesting little many-gang tools which a woman had stored in her attic, and she picked up a very interesting blanket

GRAND JURY RECESSES

Chicago, July 13—(AP)—Chicago's grand jury inquiry into election troubles was at rest today for the week end, and in its recess special prosecutor Frank J. Loesch took occasion to tell what he expects of it next week. His program, he said, calls for 14 true bills to be voted within the week, bringing under indictment several of the "higher-ups" of the reputed alliance of crime and politics.

Four Are Killed In Crash of An English Plane

Croydon, England, July 13—(AP)—

Two women and two men were burned to death in the crash of an airplane at Purley today. One of the men was A. Hall, aeronautical inspection director of the Croydon aerodrome.

The pilot was badly injured and sent to the hospital, while another passenger escaped with slight hurts.

The plane was seen to dive and then recover slightly. Then dive again and crash in flames. Desperate efforts were made to get the victims free, but the fierceness of the flames prevented this.

The plane, a single engined machine used for carrying baggage between London and the continent had recently been reconducted.

In addition to the pilot, the plane carried two women and three men attached to the aerodrome staff.

HOOVER MANAGERS TURN ATTENTION TOWARD THE WEST

Fight in East Not to Eliminate Interest in The West

Washington, July 13—(AP)—Although the situation in the east is admittedly their first consideration, the directors of Herbert Hoover's campaign for the presidency are finding time to prepare for ballot drives in the middle west and on the Pacific coast.

Conferences are planned with the party leaders of each of these sections, the first to be held in Chicago early next month and the second at San Francisco on August 13, after Mr. Hoover has been officially notified of his selection by the national convention.

Plan Chicago Meeting

Members of the National Committee from states lying between the Alleghenies and the Rockies have been asked to attend the Chicago meeting. Chairman Work, who at that time will be on his way to California, will be present at Mr. Hoover's notification, will preside. Under the present plans two days will be devoted to a discussion of the middle western situation.

From Palo Alto, where the notification ceremony is to take place on August 11, Mr. Work will go to San Francisco to meet the committee-men of the Pacific coast. In announcing the two conferences Mr. Hoover's headquarters said simply that they would be held for the purpose of planning the campaign for the states of those sections.

Mr. Hoover has been informed that "95 percent of the so-called German vote" will support him at the polls in November.

HIS BIG LESSON

"Lots of reading on it," he observed as he perused the text of the bond application with great interest.

"Huh!" remarked the clerk with the paper. "I'll bet you didn't read your marriage license that carefully."

"Maybe not," was the reply. "But ever since I signed that I'm reading everything."—Youngstown Telegram.

CHALLENGER MUST BE GOOD

Gene Tunney, training at Speculator for the defense of his heavyweight championship title against Tom Heeney, expresses the belief that the approaching contest will be the last of the million dollar shows that Tex Rickard has made almost commonplace events.

"I always have maintained," Tunney says, "that the challenger makes the fight. The champion, no matter who he happens to be, cannot draw the attendance unless he has an opponent who it least gives the promise of a contest. Heeney is the only challenger who has an appeal and it will be a long time before another contender is developed."

THEY NEED A REST

Last winter Tunney was quarreling with Rickard about the summer program on which the promoter had made him for only one heavyweight championship fight. He had said if he had not won two contests for him he would work in a second contest with some other promoter.

But now he thinks that the heavyweight championship fights have lost their luster and that in every four or five years would be enough.

"I did think last winter that two fights could be arranged," he said, "but look what happened to the eligible contenders during the indoor season. I believe that the public has had enough of million dollar boxing. Perhaps the recent prosperity of the sport was due in part to the fact that some of the former champions gave the public a rest for two or three years."

WHADDY SAY, TEX—

Tunney blames Rickard for the million dollar tag that has reacted against the business.

"Rickard is a nice fellow and a capable man," the champion says, "but I think sometimes he has gone 'million dollar' daffy. He talks only in terms of millions and he rates his friends by the millions that they have. I think he could do something for the business if he would reduce prices and purses. The boxers would kick, of course, but they can't ask for more than their share of the receipts."

KIDDING THE EDITORS

Tunney is no ardent defender of the business in which he is engaged, but he becomes aroused when the world's press, a classic football game or any other athletic show is held up as being of greater interest to the public than a heavyweight championship fight.

"The heavyweight championship fight is the only event that will keep men waiting on the street until two or three o'clock in the morning for an extra," he said. "I know from publishers and circulation managers also that a heavyweight championship fight is the best seller."

"Just recently, I read an expert story by two press association writers in which the opinion was expressed that the Olympic games would be by far the outstanding event of the season. That is bosh. Anyone could read between the lines that they were selling themselves to their editors for a trip to the Olympic games. I don't know of anyone who cares a darn about the Olympic games and I have good reasons to know that such personal propaganda had no influence on their editors. The editors know that the Olympic games will not sell two dozen papers."

What Averages of Leagues Show

NATIONAL LEAGUE

New York, July 14—(AP)—Rogers Hornsby not only remains well in the lead over Paul Waner for individual batting honors in the National League, but also owns once more a percentage figure above .400. Averages issued today and including games of last Wednesday show the Boston manager at .403 for 72 engagements, in which he had made 56 singles, 28 doubles, two triples and 16 home runs.

Hornsby's 28 doubles constitute the best mark in the league in that detail, while his 16 home runs entitled him to fourth place behind these race setters: Hack Wilson, Chicago, 22; Jim Bottomley, St. Louis, 20; and Del Bissonette, Brooklyn, 17.

St. Louis players again figure prominently in individual achievement. In addition to ranking second in home runs, Bottomley leads in runs scored with 76 and in triples with 12, he also is tied with Bissonette for the greatest number of runs batted in—73. Frank Frisch tops the base thieves with a string of 16, and Taylor Douthett still sets the pace with the greatest number of hits—120.

Individual honors in pitching go to Cincinnati once more. Red Lucas has a record of nine victories and two defeats, enabling him to oust Larry Benton of New York from the pinacle.

Following Hornsby are these regular batters: P. Waner, Pittsburgh, .363; Grantham, Pittsburgh, .362; Herman, Brooklyn, .358; Bottomley, St. Louis, .350; Sisler, Boston, .348; Douthett, St. Louis, .348; Lindstrom, New York, .344; Callaghan, Cincinnati, .343; and Loettger, St. Louis, .341.

The Pirates are on top in team batting with a mark of .304, followed by the Cardinals, ten points lower.

Addison Grant, the ace of the Cleveland hurling staff, has met his equal and the result was that he tumbled to second place in the moundsmen's records and Alvin Crowder, veteran St. Louis Browns right hander, mounted to the leadership position among the pitchers in the American League.

Grant lost his first game of the season last week, the Philadelphia Athletics pounding his offerings to all corners of the lot during his three inning sojourn on the mound. The defeat gave the Cleveland pitcher a record of seven wins and one loss and relegated him to second position as Crowder turned in his ninth victory as against one defeat.

Lon Gehrig replaced Tony Lazzeri as the Yankee threat on "Goose" Goslin's batting leadership, according to the unofficial figures released today and including games of Wednesday.

Goslin reduced his average 2 points this week to .404 meanwhile Simmons went on a rampage and tacked 30 points onto his standing to end the week's play with an average of .377, which was good for second place. Gehrig batted his standing seven points to take third place with an average of .372.

Other leading hitters are: Lazzeri, New York, .358; Manush, St. Louis, .341; E. Miller, Philadelphia, .341; Fox, Philadelphia, .338; Cobb, Philadelphia, .332; Kress, St. Louis, .326; Fonseca, Cleveland, .325; Koenig, New York, .325; Myer, Boston, .324; Fothergill, Detroit, .324; Dugan, New York, .324.

The Yankees dropped four points in team batting to .304 but they were still 11 points in front of the Athletics.

The Boston Red Sox continued their brilliant defensive work and end the week's play with an average of .976. Three points better than the Browns in runner-up position.

Watching the Big Scoreboard

BY HERBERT W. BARKER

Associated Press Sports Writer
Since John McGraw led his New York Giants across the Alleghenies on the latest western invasion things have been going from bad to worse for him.

The first foes that the Giants encountered were the Pittsburgh Pirates. The Giants bowled over the Corsairs in the first game. Here the worn team, the Pirates played heads up baseball for a change and took the next three battles of the series.

Not so confident McGraw's men took the long train trip to St. Louis where the four game series which ended yesterday saw them register only one victory.

As a consequence the Giants fell into third place in the standing, six and a half games back of the on-rushing Cardinals and one behind the Cincinnati Reds.

The Cards won the last battle of the "curial series" by getting the jump on their eastern rivals. Vic Aldridge was pounded for three runs in the first inning, five more crossed the platter in the second and the end of the game saw the leaders on the long end of an 11 to 6 score.

Rain halted hostilities at every other major league point.

Independents to Go to Rockford Sunday

The Dixon Independents, cheered by a 3 to 1 victory over the last Porreston team in their first Blackhawk League contest, go to Rockford tomorrow to meet the Rockford H. A. C. outfit. Reddish and Skelton will be the battery for the Independents and it is expected the Dixon boys will give a good account of themselves in their second league game.

With Tunney in His Training Camp

EDITOR'S NOTE—This is the second of a series of articles covering the training camps of Gene Tunney and Tom Heeney, heavyweight rivals in the championship bout of July 26, by Henry L. Farrell, NEA Service and The Telegraph sports writer. Farrell's articles give for the first time opinions of Tunney on the fight racket, his ideas about marriage, his dislike of crowds and his desire to live his own life as well as glimpses into the training activities of the two fighters and a final summing up of the contestants in the coming fight with a selection of the winner.

BY HENRY L. FARRELL

NEA Service Sports Writer.

Speculator, N. Y.—Contradicting what has come to be almost a general public conviction, Gene Tunney, in training here for the defense of his heavyweight championship title against Tom Heeney, says in his quiet, forceful and convincing way that he is not preparing for his last fight.

He not only denies that he is to retire after he collects another half million dollars for his July 26 engagement but he tells you in the next breath of his purpose to keep a string of regular employed sparring partners in the future.

He admits that it is impossible to keep his fighting equipment in the proper condition with only one contest a year and he reaches the conclusion that as economic conditions will permit not more than one major contest a year he will have to box regularly with sparring partners.

"Why should I retire?" he shot at the writer when the subject was brought up.

"Well, you don't like the racket. You have plenty of money and you don't have to do anything you don't like."

"The question of not liking the business doesn't enter into it," he said. "No man in the business likes it. We are all in it as a business. The men who say they like it are crazy. And if they do like it they become crazy. You don't have to look far to see examples."

In a clever and subtle way that could be repeated only by a direct quotation that only a short-hand reporter could note, Tunney intimated his belief that to get away from the business he might not have to retire and that the business might retire away from him.

"How long do you think boxing will last?" he asked.

"It seems to be going along on its own momentum and getting away with murder."

"Murder, that's just what it may come to and then we'll see," Tunney cut in. "Some of these days a referee or a judge will be killed and then we will see where the business is. The game, as they call it, is now filled with dirty, sordid politics and most of the fighters are involved mostly as instruments. Thugs and political gangs have taken control of boxing. We know that the influence behind the whole sport in New York is political."

"I know who is to blame and he knows that I know. I'll admit I am bitter. But for several years I was deprived actually of making my bread and butter because of the animosity that three persons held against me. After years of self-denial and self-abnegation I was prevented from getting the chance to fight Harry Wills and twice I was not permitted to fight Jack Dempsey in my own home town. I know who prevented it and I am aware of the reasons for their interference. They know that I know and that's the reason this coming contest is being permitted in New York. One of them said Paul Berlenbach was his ideal champion and look what Berlenbach became.

"But I have been able to disassociate myself from a lot of the unpleasant contacts in the business and for I am tired of the business, yes, but I am not criticized, but I don't care. I find time for recreation and enjoyment in my own way and in the company of people that I like. I don't like crowds, the hand shaking with strange people and the answering of so many inane questions. I always have been shy and instead of getting over it with so much public contact I have become worse. I don't know what to do with strangers or what to say. I have read so much about myself in the papers—under the X-ray, so to speak—that I keep wondering what kind of a person I am and what the people who are looking at me are thinking. I think the public must be fed up on reading about me. I always have been sensitive and you know that I have had any number of opportunities to experiment with ways of hardening that sensitive feeling, but I just can't do it."

"I avoid crowds and public prominence because it is an energy-sapping ordeal and is not conducive to the complete relaxation that an athlete must have regularly to conserve his strength, his nerves and his temper. Against all counter-irritants, I am trying to live my own life and be myself."

Managing Officer of Jacksonville Hospital Is Dead

Jacksonville, Ill., July 13—(AP)—Death of Dr. E. L. Hill, managing officer of the Jacksonville State Hospital here yesterday, removed from state service an official who has taken the lead in institution reform. He died following two operations, from which he failed to rally.

Appointed to his post by Governor Dunne in 1915 Doctor Hill directed the removal of all instruments of restraint in the hospital and the substitution of more humane methods, such as occupational and hydrotherapy. Under his guidance the institution added a 3,000 acre farm to his domain, and cultivated it almost entirely by use of the labor of insane patients.

Before entering the service Doctor Hill was a practicing physician at Red Bud in Randolph county.

BIBLE CONFERENCE OPENS SUNDAY P. M. WITH FINE PROGRAM

recognition and affection for his simple and life-strengthening essays and lectures on the eternal themes and virtues and divine holiness.

At 6.45, the Conference President will conduct a service for young people particularly, with whom Rev. Marshall enjoys happy popularity.

The widening scope of conference interest and attendance is evidenced by the action of the Polo pastors in bringing their combined vested choirs to participate in the evening services tomorrow. The zealous approval of the conference by the two directors living in Polo, the Revs. Frank Hancock and D. P. Blair, is largely the cause of this delightful feature of the initial session this year.

Bishop Hughes in Evening
Bishop Edwin H. Hughes of Chicago is the evening speaker, 7.30. His strength and standing as a churchman, thinker, and orator are most favorably known here already. Only a few days ago, he opened the historic Des Plaines Camp-meeting with a great address, and comes to Dixon in the morning appointment at Lake Geneva, Wis.

The Officers
Besides President Marshall, already mentioned, this year's officers of the Conference are: Vice President—Rev. L. W. Walter. Secretary—Jesse U. Weyant. Treasurer—W. C. Durkes. Financial Secretary—Rev. P. Brandellner.

Nine laymen and fifteen ministers from Dixon and surrounding cities stand with the above executive group to form the general board of directors, which plans and carries forward this annual religious fellowship and inspiration.

Local workers have given themselves this year most happily and energetically in the work of preparation. Practically all the churches will have no evening services tomorrow, and all will be centered at the park. Many nearby congregations will do the same. Only very unfavorable weather conditions can reduce the attendance for the afternoon below two thousand the officers feel.

Traffic markers and posters over the city have been helpfully located by Rev. Brandellner and Ray Miller. The assembly office with telephone, mail boxes, check room, information desk, etc., will be in charge of Misses Helen Brandellner and Ruth Marshall. Howard Crews is tabernacle custodian. On Monday, the W. P. Blessing Company will put on display their mammoth stock of religious books in Bible Hall.

A School of Music for church choir members and directors will be offered by Mr. Jenkins and Miss Tripp, using Chautauqua hall for the lessons, with a special sacred concert in anticipation as a resultant section of the Conference's closing session, the evening of the 22nd. This will be fully explained at tomorrow's services.

Good Program Sunday
Monday's program will open at 9.30, with Bible Study Hour by Dr. Frank N. Palmer of Winona Lake, Ind. S. D. Gordon follows at 10.30. At 2.00 in the afternoon the speaker will be the Rev. H. C. Roehner, pastor of one of the largest United Lutheran Churches in the world, at Mansfield, O. Bishop Hughes will be heard again at 3 o'clock.

The night session presents S. D. Gordon again, and Bishop Hughes' third and last message.

Three Meetings Daily
The three meetings daily, from Sunday to Sunday, will give fullest opportunity to all to hear these master-workmen in the field of morals and the Christian religion. Admissions are free always. Voluntary offerings are received each session. The Conference is not a promoting agency of any sort. Its high purpose is to instruct, inspire, and uplift—all by the power of God's Holy Word. All present or possible students of the Bible and servants of the Lord are invited most sincerely. Tomorrow's feast of good things has received such abundant acceptance and call that a most wonderful day is anticipated in Dixon's beautiful park where listening audiences can look out upon the grass-grown graves of previous races, and rise with their hearts toward the God of Life, as His servants unfold His plan of eternal redemption.

TAFT'S NIECE TO WED

Anne Ingalls, Daughter of Railway Chief, Will Marry British Army Officer

NEA

A romance that started in Cairo, Egypt, two years ago, will have its culmination when Anne Taft Ingalls, daughter of Albert E. Ingalls of Cleveland, O. vice president of the New York Central railroad, marries Major Rupert Warburton, British army officer now stationed in Palestine. Miss Ingalls is a grandniece of Chief Justice William Howard Taft of the United States supreme court. Her engagement was announced in Cleveland the other day.

Rescuer and Rescued

In Path of Big Storm

Ruins in the wake of the Tennessee storm that killed 12 and caused millions of dollars in property damage, are pictured above. Miss Emma Wharton had just closed a window of her home in Belle Meade park, when the tree shown above crashed into the room she had left. Below is the splintered wreck of the home of W. R. Davenport at Alexandria, Tenn., which was blown across a road and plunged into a tree while the family was inside. The family was rescued after several hours imprisonment in shattered home.

WANTED—

DEMOCRATS WILL CANVASS STATES TO GET FORECAST

Will Size Up Various Sections Before Campaign Starts

New York, July 13—(AP)—A state by state canvass to determine the political lay of the land is to be made before the Democratic presidential campaign gets into full swing.

Conditions locally are to be sized up by members of the Democratic National Committee, who were on their way home today after a series of conferences here which brought about a national campaign organization with John J. Haskob, financial chairman of General Motors, at its head.

The committeemen, keyed up by words of encouragement from Gov. Smith, the standard bearer, are to report as soon as possible to Senator Gerry of Rhode Island, chairman of the campaign advisory committee. Until they have done so, the full scope of the Democratic national campaign will not be determined.

Gov. Smith Is Tired
Plainly showing the effects of an almost endless round of conferences during the last 48 hours, Governor Smith planned today to return before rightfall to Albany. His future plans are indefinite, as the date for his official notification at the capital has not been fixed.

Raskob, his close friend, who will be the campaign generalissimo, was at his summer home in Maryland, shunting aside until next week the problems of campaign.

In a final conference yesterday at which views were freely exchanged in the presence of Gov. Smith, who from time to time also offered his suggestions, members of the national committee discussed the campaign outlook. No decisions were reached except that all should return home and get affairs in their own states ship-shape.

Gov. Smith told the party workers that he was ready to press his campaign for the presidency to the limit, but that he doubted the wisdom of undertaking too many speeches now. He starts out on a stumping tour around Labor Day.

Daniels Takes Issue
From the south came the word that Josephus Daniels, Secretary of the Navy under Wilson, had taken issue with Raskob on his emphasis of the prohibition question as a campaign issue.

Daniels, through his newspaper at Raleigh, North Carolina, praised the new national committee chairman but denied his right to stress issues "not settled in the platform of the party."

FRANKLIN GROVE NEWS NOTES

Franklin Grove—The Triangle Class of the Methodist Sunday school taught by Miss Flora Wicker enjoyed a tour around the world Tuesday night sailing from the Durkes home July 10, 1928, at 7:30 on the famous liner Imagination. Upon arriving at the Durkes home each one was given a passport, on which were several questions. England was the first stop, at which place a game of football was most heartily enjoyed. The game was played with an empty egg shell which was blown across a table which was used for the ball ground. Much merriment was caused by that. Stops were made at France, Russia, Egypt, China and home again to the United States where most delicious refreshments were served by the hostesses, Miss Dorothy Durkes and Misses Clara and Phyllis Durkes. It most certainly was an evening long to be remembered for its pleasure.

Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Gross and daughter Miss Carrie, Mrs. A. W. Crawford and Wm. Gorton were Rockford visitors Monday.

The swimming pool will be opened to the public Monday. The pool was closed for a week during the Epworth League Institute. From now until cold weather it will be opened every day.

Miss Eleanor McClure of Galesburg, who is attending the Teachers' College at DeKalb was a week end guest at the home of her friend, Miss Lois Crawford.

Chester Seelman of Peoria was visiting among his friends here this week.

Alteneberg Unit of the American Legion Auxiliary was entertained by Mrs. Hannah Conlon Wednesday, July 11. Sixteen ladies were in attendance and listened to States Attorney M. V. Peterman of Oregon give a very interesting talk of his trip to Paris last summer as a delegate to the American Legion Convention. At the close of the address the regular meeting of the Unit was taken up. Plans were made to hold a picnic on the Camp Grounds July 18. Members of the Lee County Auxiliary to be entertained by the Franklin Grove members.

Mrs. Charles Randolph left Tuesday morning for her home at Silverwood, Ind., after a visit of several weeks at the home of her sister, Miss Lucy Krehl.

Mr. and Mrs. John Haggard of Chicago were guests Tuesday at the home of their niece Miss Flora Wicker.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Lease of Savannah were Sunday visitors at the home of her sister Mr. and Mrs. La-Forrest Meredith.

Mr. and Mrs. Laverne Kibbie and baby left Friday morning for an auto trip to Redfield, Kansas, where they will visit his parents.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Gross and son Kenneth expect to leave Saturday for Lake Superior, Wis., where they expect to spend two weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. Will Schultz of Mason City, Iowa were guests Friday at the home of his cousin, Mr. and Mrs. George Schultz.

Miss Virgie Cluts and friend of Rochelle were guests a few days this week at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Hood.

W. C. Hawthorne of Chicago was a guest Wednesday at the home of Mrs. Clara Smith.

Mrs. Hannah Conlon entertained with dinner today Mrs. Frank Hatch and children, Misses Mae Howard, Clara Lamm and Grace Pearl.

the afternoon Bishop Edwin Holt Hughes of Chicago area was the attraction on the program and the large tabernacle was nearly filled with people who listened with great interest to his splendid discourse, which was full of humor, well-organized, forcefully delivered, the truth driven into the hearts of all who heard him. Many from here will no doubt avail themselves of the opportunity to hear him Sunday night at the Bible Conference at the Dixon Assembly grounds.

Monday was registration day. More than 150 young people have registered for class work, counting the faculty and others there fine about two hundred people on the camp grounds at date, more are expected to arrive Friday night for over the week end.

After the introductions of the various members of the faculty and announcements concerning the courses, the rest of Monday evening was in charge of Rev. Morgan Williams of Chicago in a "Get Acquainted social". Clever games and stunts helped to break the ice and establish acquaintanceship. Classes began Tuesday morning with a fine attendance and interest. Rev. A. J. Tavenner, pastor of the local Methodist church is the teacher of the class of Life Service.

Tuesday evening a fine address was given by Rev. Morgan Williams. Last night a splendid audience was gripped by the Shield's great photoplay, "The Stream of Life." Tonight is Stunt night, tomorrow, Friday night, the address will be given by Rev. A. T. Stephenson, pastor of the Dixon church and on Saturday night the camp fire will be held.

family were former residents of this place, he having conducted a grocery store here for several years and later moving to Rockford: "H. E. Keller of Rockford who has been secured as General Field Secretary for Mt. Morris College, was detained by 'flu' Monday and could not take up the work for which he has been selected. Thursday he expects to be here and will make Mt. Morris his headquarters and his home a little later in the summer."

Mt. Morris College is fortunate in securing a man of the caliber of Mr. Keller, who was associated for fifteen years with Bethany Bible School of Chicago, who had charge of the financial work there. He comes with the best wishes to his many friends and we sincerely welcome Mr. Keller and his family to Mt. Morris and to Mt. Morris College—Mt. Morris Index.

Tuscola Radio Is Protesting Order To Discontinue

Washington, D. C., July 13—(AP)—One of the pioneer radio stations, WIZ at Tuscola, Ill., which has been broadcasting since 1921, was represented before the Federal Radio commission today in an effort to disprove a decision that it is not being operated to the best advantage of the public.

James L. Bush, its owner, introduced sample programs consisting of grain and livestock reports which he said had been broadcast regularly for the last seven years. The station is one of 91 in the fourth or midwest zone ordered to discontinue August 1, and one of 55 protesting the order.

Mines Flooded And Much Loss In Ohio

St. Clairville, Ohio, July 13—(AP)—Seven hundred men working at the Webb mine, 18 miles south of here, were out of employment today and damage estimated at $500,000 was caused when the Weege creek, laden with waters of heavy rains, overflowed its banks and flooded the valley, last night.

The Webb mine was flooded, damaging much of the property and sweeping thirty loaded mine cars before it. Twenty-five automobiles at the mine were caught by the food as the water swept through the valley, partially destroying them.

The Weege mine was also flooded. The Ohio River and Western Railroad was one of the heavy sufferers of the flood damage, with 10 of its bridges reported swept down the stream.

Reports from towns near Steubenville a 4 Wheeling indicated known damage of $500,000 with the loss likely to be much higher when contacts could be resumed with outlying communities.

One man was drowned, several others injured, railroads and highway traffic obstructed, rivers swollen and much property damage done by torrential rains.

THREE BURN IN PLANE
Houston, Texas, July 13—(AP)—Three men were believed to have been burned to death when an airplane crashed at Palacios, Texas, about 55 miles from here, at noon today. Witnesses said they saw three men enter the plane, which crashed into the town and burned up before rescuers could reach it.

ROB IOWA BANK

Northwood, Iowa, July 13—(AP)—Four men obtained about $10,000 in cash and an undetermined quantity of Liberty bonds from the First National bank here today. Congressman Gilbert M. Haugen is president of the bank.

After the robbery, the men fled in an automobile and were believed headed toward the Minnesota state line. Country rangers at Albert Lea, Minn., are on the lookout for the robbers and all highways in this section are guarded.
